

Roots sticking up into the sky

During the time when God was adding the finishing touches to the world, he knew that in Africa he needed to create something useful. Water would always be a problem on the continent so he came up with the baobab. The plan was to make the tree hollow in the top so that it could store water after the rains. God was very proud of this creation but the devil did not find it so great. The devil took his revenge by turning all the trees upside down. If we look at a baobab we can see that it looks like the roots are sticking up into the sky, the hollow part now being in lower part of the tree.
